LOCALLY ADAPTED SEEDS & PLANTS

From the ground up, we want your project to be the best it can be. That's why we always prioritize plants and seeds that are best adapted to local climates and soils, which also boosts their resistance to diseases and makes them better suited to local insect populations. All the seeds and plants we offer are of known genetic origin, which means we know exactly where they came from and where they're suited to thrive.

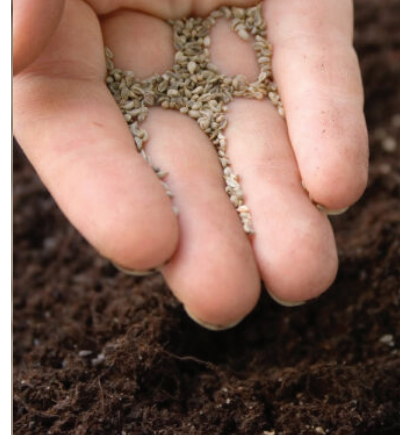

OUR PHILOSOPHY

Heritage Growers' guiding philosophy is rooted in improving the success of habitat restoration. High-quality seeds and plants are fundamental to successful restoration. Our passion is helping guide our clients' restoration success by applying lessons learned from decades of experience. Together, we can move the science and practice of habitat restoration in California forward.

OUR STORY

We know how important the right partners are for a project's success. Restoration is challenging enough as it is, let alone when you don't have good friends in the business to help guide you.

Heritage Growers was started by the seasoned restoration experts at the statewide river-restoration nonprofit River Partners. Founded in 1998, River Partners pioneered large-scale habitat restoration in California through rigorous research and experimentation. Heritage Growers is making the lessons learned through years of trial, error, and success available to our customers. Our mission is to, together, mend the mosaic of California's natural wonders with each native seed and plant.

After two decades of driving large-scale habitat restoration, we've learned that seeds and plants thrive if they're from wildland locations similar soil, hydrology, and climate to sites being restored. We've also learned that regionally appropriate seeds aren't always available. That's why we launched Heritage Growers.

And, we're so committed to restoring California's environment that all Heritage Growers' profits are put straight back into funding River Partners' statewide restoration efforts. When you choose Heritage Growers, you become part of our legacy of restoring vibrant landscapes and a thriving California for future generations.
